Keep current

In practice since the late 70s, microcurrent technology is making a comeback. Innovative treatment offerings are popping up at medi-spas and skin-care salons throughout the country, and beauty companies are incorporating the technology into anti-aging products. The process involves applying a low-level electrical current to the skin, which is thought to strengthen muscle tone, tighten tissues, increase blood and lymph flow and improve the appearance of wrinkles, dark circles and puffiness. Though there's controversy surrounding the effectiveness of microcurrent technology, at the very least you'll enjoy a pampering skin treatment.

NUFACE MICROCURRENT SYSTEM

By delivering gentle microcurrent pulses to strategic points on the face, NuFace claims to diminish fine lines and wrinkles by improving muscle tone and increasing collagen and elastin levels in the skin—all in just a few minutes a day. NuFace can also be used before and after surgical treatments (with your doctor's OK) to strengthen muscles, increase circulation and promote lymphatic drainage, which are thought to aid the skin's recovery. $650. I CLEANSED AND DRIED MY FACE, AND APPLIED THE PATCHES UNDER MY EYES AS DIRECTED. I FELT A SLIGHT TINGLING SENSATION AROUND MY EYES FOR THE FIRST FEW MINUTES—THEN IT SUBSIDED. THE PATCHES CAME OFF QUICKLY AND EASILY. I NOTICED THAT THE SKIN AROUND MY EYES LOOKED A LITTLE SMOOTHER. —SUSAN, 43
